Sekine Factory

Sekine Factory is a 100-year-old, family-owned furniture factory in Japan. Drawing on historical kiri drawers, which were made to hold the kimonos of new brides, Sekine's boxes are scaled to hold another kind of treasure—coffee. An interior lid fits precisely on top to keep the beans nestled securely. A splash of Blue Bottle blue was added just for us.

“For centuries, kiri wood was one of the best ways to preserve treasured objects. A sword, precious book, or silk kimono would remain safe from outside elements when tightly enclosed in a box or drawer made from it. My goal in making a kiri box just for coffee was to bridge the ancient and modern. I love coffee. It makes people’s lives richer. I wanted to connect one traditional object used for safekeeping with a contemporary treasure worth storing.”

– Mr. Sekine
